

What makes the government think that I am ok with receiving a soliciting phone call at 8:00 pm when I am sitting with my family for the first time on our busy days? Or Sunday afternoon, when my father is visiting? Or even 5:00 pm, while I am trying to relax after a long day's work? There is NO convenient time to call me. And most of all, I currently do not have the money to drive to the store to purchase WHAT I WANT, so why would I be ok with someone calling me to PUSH their product, credit card, or service on me?

Some of these telemarketers call, and call, and call until someone finally answers the phone, so not answering an unknown number is not the solution, unless you don't mind hearing your phone ring all day, but I do. I feel I am being invaded in my own home, the place where I should feel most comfortable and secure, when telemarketers are permitted to make their calls. When I read that the federal government is challenging New Jersey's law, I was outraged.
